Global Q Solutions

People look for debt help at 10pm. Your website should answer them and book the call.

A before-and-after look at globalqsolutions.co.za today and the proposed redesign, measured in the same browser on the same day.

How the two sites compare on a phone

Most clients will find Global Q on a phone. On the current site, the first thing they see is a block of contact details. The headline starts 322px down the screen, and there's no way to call with one tap.

Today Headline starts 322px down. Stock photo from a theme demo.

Proposed Headline at 125px, debt check and call button in reach.

Check (homepage, Chromium, 1440px and 390px)	Today	Proposed
Page weight, desktop / phone	1 852 / 1 823 KB	593 / 368 KB
Files requested, desktop / phone	57 / 49	17 / 13
Images loaded from a theme demo site (demo.gutenify.com)	23 of 24	0 of 6
Images with no description for screen readers	23 of 24	0 of 6
Tap targets smaller than 24px, phone	21	0
Tap-to-call phone links	0	3
Forms on the homepage to request help	0	1 form + chat booking
Leftover template text ("Please install Mailchimp plugin…")	Yes	No
Different street addresses on the page	2 (123 and 124)	1
"99.99% success" claim	Yes	Removed
Assistant / savings calculator	No / No	Yes / Yes

Load time isn't compared because the proposed site was measured on a local preview, not live hosting. Neither site shows an NCR registration number yet. The new design has a clearly marked place for it.

What changes

Every problem on today's site, and how the redesign fixes it

Today	Proposed
Generic stock photo of a businesswoman from the theme's demo	An animated bank statement: six red debit orders struck off and replaced by one affordable payment. It shows the service in five seconds
"From over-indebted to debt-free in 5 easy steps", but the steps never appear	The 5 steps are laid out as a timeline, from free assessment to clearance certificate
No way to get help after 17:00	Q, a 24/7 assistant: answers questions, runs a 4-question debt check, books a call-back
No form on the homepage; "Call Me Back" leads to a separate page	Call-back form on the page with SA phone checks and POPIA consent, plus booking in chat
Phone number isn't tappable on mobile	Tap-to-call in the header, the contact section and a floating button
"Please install Mailchimp plugin" and placeholder blog posts are visible	All template content removed. Three useful guides, each linked to Q
Two different addresses (123 and 124)	One address everywhere, with structured data for Google Maps
No NCR number; "99.99% success" claim	Trust strip with NCR registration, National Credit Act, free assessment and POPIA. No unprovable claims
Services shown as 8 identical boxes with "Know More"	Services grouped by situation: "I'm struggling", "I want to clean up my record", "I run a business"
No way to see possible savings	Savings calculator with before and after bars and a plain-language result
Typos: "We helps you", unclosed quotation marks	Plain, warm, edited copy written for people under stress
Images and text unlabeled for screen readers; small tap targets	Accessibility built in: contrast, focus rings, 44px targets, alt text, reduced-motion support

> "Your clients look for help at night, on their phones. Today they find a template. We'll give them a site that answers, checks if they qualify, and books the call, so you start every morning with warm leads."

Prices exclude VAT. The once-off fee can be paid as a 50% deposit and the balance on launch, or in 3 equal monthly payments. Monthly fees run month-to-month after 6 months. Meta's WhatsApp message fees (Premium) are passed on at cost. Live in about 2–3 weeks. Quote valid for 30 days.

For reference, published 2026 South African rates: custom small-business websites R15 000–R30 000, custom AI chatbot builds R25 000–R80 000, WhatsApp chatbot setup R6 900–R15 000. Growth delivers both the site and the assistant for less than most quotes for either one.

Why Growth pays for itself

Growth costs R1 250 a month. Under NCR fee guidelines, each new debt review client brings a restructuring fee plus monthly aftercare fees. So if Q books even one extra client a month, it typically covers the cost. Every client after that adds to the bottom line.

> "One extra client a month pays for it. Q works the hours your office is closed."

30-second pitch for the meeting

1. "I looked at your site on my phone. Your headline is hidden under contact details, and the number isn't tappable."
2. "Some template text is still live, like 'Please install Mailchimp plugin', and the images load from another company's demo site."
3. "Here's the redesign." Show the statement animation, then run the debt check in Q.
4. "Every chat ends with a booked call-back and the client's figures attached, waiting for you at 08:30."
5. "Growth is R16 500 once-off and R1 250 a month. One extra client covers it. Can we start this month?"
